The house is on fire and Trump is running around with a box of matches
Republican Congress wants to arrest the person who called the fire department.

While Dem campaigns have been fundraising and listbuilding for the primary, as is expected Trump has spent more than $5 million on Facebook ads and outspent Dems 6 to 1 on video ads, focused largely on persuading general election voters. We've answered that with next to nothing

Bottom line: donors, activists, the DNC and allied super PACs should engage TODAY in a year long air cover effort to define Trump and next year's election and provide air cover for the nominee.

Instead of going after Biden with silly, manufactured narratives, they should focus the ineptness and dangers of Trump admin and hammer it in.

Start a Dem Media PAC to brand Trump as the criminal he is las @DonnyDeutsch suggested. You can name it Citizens for Facts and Truth in Politics(or whatever) and I will contribute. I'm sure others would too. There is plenty of factual evidence out there to do it.

The previous tweet just told you $5million on Facebook ads. (Just substitute the name "Putin" for "trump" since it's the same thing anyway.)

While 23 candidates compete for the Dem nomination, Trump is using the playbook we on the Obama campaign used in '12, Bush used against Kerry, and Clinton against Dole to set the terms of the general election. This is alarming and we must answer it fast:

I find this extremely amusing. @TOMFORD told @vogue magazine that he met @PeteButtigieg at a lunch and found that the mayor's suit didn't fit him and that well. So he then texted @Chas10Buttigieg with some fashion tips!

My only theory behind the Castro attack last night was that he's coordinating with another campaign. The notion that he was some sort of crusader in the administration who ran around disagreeing with Obama and Biden doesn't ring true to anyone who worked in it.

Senator Warren's although I don't think she expected him to be that strident. I also think he has been playing stalking horse attack dog for her in every one of these debates in exchange for being at the top of her VP list.

Smart piece. Guns are pouring into major cities from neighboring states that don't require background checks. If you want to crack down on violent crime in cities, you've got to start at the point of origin for the gun sale.

I'm glad the talking points are getting pressure tested tonight. Too easy for primary debates to devolve into happy talk. We need a plan we can run on in purple states and win, then pass through a Congress where many Dems will have come from highly competitive races.

Missed this. It's completely insane to attack funding for after school programs for kids. Anyone that's spent any time looking at the public education system knows that this is essential for both students and parents.

It's a microcosm. Warren is doing the work. Pete went to Harvard, was elected mayor of a small town with a total of 8,515 votes, and now thinks he deserves to be president. Warren fights for results for working people. Pete thinks it's your job to figure out how awesome he is all of whom held at least one statewide elected office before running for President. Age isn't the issue, experience is. Your guy was re-elected with 8,515 votes and gentrified a small town. There's a bit of a gap there between him and the folks you mention.

The fact that you can't support your candidate without attacking @PeteButtigieg is a tell on the state of the race. Might want to take Harvard out of your talking points though, seems like she has an association on that front 😉.

But I can't help but think of the fact that Windsor's case ultimately boiled down the fact that she was required to pay estate taxes she didn't want to pay. In winning her case, Windsor made it easier for herself and other wealthy gay people to hoard their wealth within the confines of the nuclear family. Her marriage wasn't only an important symbol of gay love's legitimacy, but a newly Nancy Pelosi's District in California has rapidly become one of the worst anywhere in the U.S. when it come to the homeless & crime. It has gotten so bad, so fast... she has lost total control and, along with her equally incompetent governor, Gavin Newsom, it is a very sad sight!

Two reliable polls: Des Moines Register on Friday & Monmouth out just now showing very different standings (including Biden in 4th vs 1st, by a difference of 9 points)

Seemed like the only one interested in speaking to Iowans throughout, and made it clear that's what he was doing in the closing

Bobby Hill @BobbyHill4Pete · 13h

Same thing I noticed. Pete (and to a lesser extent, Amy) seemed to be the only one who realized that this was an Iowa debate, not a national one. Something the moderators in the post-debate roundrobin seemed to be missing too. Pete was very focused on Iowa/Midwest issues.

Unqualified. Give him another ten years and some experience other than being a mayor of a small city. Maybe then.

Bryan Blessey @BryanBlessey · 12h

Respectfully, we don't have 10 years of more of the same inaction and fighting in D.C. Too much talk from legislators who do a lot of talking with little to show. Most have no executive experience & on the ground knowledge about the lives of Americans. Time for a new generation.

I've been to Iowa caucuses. First one had Gephardt as the way out pol leader. Except nobody in our large caucus precinct came out for him. No delegates. Bernie devotees will show up but nobody expected Obamas to swamp the Caucuses. This time?

Hasn't this already been done? He already ran for POTUS once. Unlike Beto, Harris & Buttigieg Sanders didn't suddenly change his positions to run for POTUS. That's why he's been consistently in the top 3 & also out fundraising every other candidate this race. #BernieBeatsTrump

Still the worst thing any candidate for president has ever done

RetroNewsNow @RetroNewsNow

On January 19, 2004, Democratic Presidential frontrunner Howard Dean, who placed a disappointing third in the Democratic Iowa precinct caucuses, launched into an animated pep talk with his supporters, later

Dave Weigel @daveweigel 17h

This has been said before but the "scream" plays out really differently if it happens in 2020. Had everybody been streaming/taking video you'd have seen, in contrast with the feed, that Dean was doing a call-and-response

I was in the room. Couldn't barely hear him because the crowd was so pumped. Disappointed by the third place finish, the rally speech was very effective. On TV obviously, not the case. Still love the guy and that campaign.

Serious question: are we saying then that it's better for the Republicans to do this if Biden were to be nominee?

The point of a primary is to work out through the flaws and put our best candidate forward, not shield the candidates from relevant criticism

This ad from last year's Australian election warning against a government that denies climate change seems all the more foreboding today, with the worst wildfires in history yet to be contained.

Australian Labor @AustralianLabor

Abbott denies it. Turnbull got dumped over it. Morrison ignores it.

Whilst the Liberals' indecisiveness continues, Australia is dealing with the real chaos of climate change.

This is also the outcome that the "If you re-write it to exempt my county or size of community I will vote for it" deal-making ensured. That energized residents in my town and region to fight it. 1/2

We have high density but a jobs/housing imbalance. 97% of residents leave town to work. Location makes all housing "unaffordable" without massive public subsidies for the new residents. Screw the greedy developers and their paid for pols. 2/2

Warren's case to be the "unity candidate" is based on picking up staff & elected support from a few fmr campaigns. May be more effective if she extends a policy olive branch to the more pragmatic candidates' supporters instead of largely embracing key tenants of Sanders' platform

I dont get the claims that Buttigieg declaring victory undermines election integrity. Building a strong organization means you have the ability to collect precinct level data. If your data ends up bad, you will rightly have your egg on your face. But if you trust it, go with it.

These campaigns spend a lot of money and work hard for an entire year not for the delegates available Iowa's total is a drop in bucket compared to Super Tuesday but for the springboard a good finish provides If you have reliable data, silly to not try to reap that momentum

I think the problem is that for a certain candidate's supporters the default response is cries of "cheating" and "election theft" In an environment where conspiracy theories are the first explanation, it's responsible to wait until the official results are made public.

24/7 disinformation panels on cable is almost like national news coverage, right? Reporting "both sides" of the law and the constitution is so much easier than investigating news. And reporters think their job is to narrow the democratic field before voters get a chance

Right, but the problem is that Sanders and AOC aren't social Democrats. They're Democratic socialists. There's a difference, as my European socialist friends were happy to point out early on. Democratic Socialists are old-school radical socialists who sucked up to the USSR

This has been a divisive time for our country, but as this chapter of history draws to a close, one thing is clear: our country deserves better than this. We must find a way to come together and to focus on what we have in common as Americans.

In case you're wondering, "everywhere else" - where Dems continue to atrophy - makes up about 68% of Iowa's November vote, which explains why IA is trending red.

In 2008, Obama took 52% in those 94 counties. In 2012, he took 49%. In 2016, Clinton took 36%.

As a San Franciscan that sees heroin needles in the streets on his way to work, great to hear the addiction discussion, but an important one is what do you do with people who refuse treatment? Our mayor has been bold enough to say they need to get it anyway.

Twelve years ago, Obama had been up 10 points for a week before NH and our crowds were huge. At our day of AM event, the crowds suddenly evaporated. As the night wore on, I spent hours reassuring reporters that college towns were still out, but then they weren't and we lost.

Twelve years ago, @brodes and I were making last minute edits with Obama to what we were confident would be a victory speech in New Hampshire. We had no concession speech, so when we found out Hillary would win, we changed the first line to congratulate her, and nothing else.

Sanders has a legit chance to reach out to others in the party. He has never given an inch on policy and he probably won't. But if you want to be the nominee, show us you can win the suburbs where we won the House in 18.

With 64% reporting, Buttigieg now just 1.8% behind Sanders, and NYT estimates that this will continue to narrow. As the night goes on, this is looking like a MUCH tighter race than expected

I think this result showed Sanders has a pretty low ceiling. If even just Biden were not in the race, Pete or Amy would be winning most likely, even with cannibalizing each other

One thing will be clear about NH: a lot of voters picked @BernieSanders in 2016 who decided to go with a different candidate in 2020. The easiest job in politics is getting repeat customers. Once someone goes to trouble to vote for you, instinct is to confirm that choice.

Given that Sanders four years ago defeated the eventual nominee by 23 points and Buttigieg was a no-name nobody just a few months ago, this has to be seen as a spectacular failure by the Bernie campaign. His weaknesses as a candidate are being harshly exposed.

Lebanon, NH (western part of the state along VT border) is fully reporting:

Sanders 25.3%
Buttigieg 25.3%
Warren 17.3%
Klobuchar 16.7%

This city was 66% Sanders 32% Clinton in 2016.

Twelve years ago, Obama had been up 10 points for a week before NH and our crowds were huge At our day of AM event, the crowds suddenly evaporated. As the night wore on I spent hours reassuring reporters that college towns were still out but then they weren't and we lost

I was told that Obama's speech would speak for itself that night, which was the Yes We Can speech, and it sure did. But I awkwardly had to ghost on the press corps as things turned south, sending an intern to sneak my thai food into the boiler room.

From the start of the campaign Sanders has been arguing that he can expand his base of support He has in some important ways But these numbers—like the numbers out of Iowa—mean a lot of people who voted for him in 2016 chose not to vote for him again this year

One difference between left and right is how they perceive the center. The right perceives it in reference to the past. The left perceives it reference to some vision of the future that they are approaching and so assume some rate of progress is the mean

Rod Blagojevich was an unpopular mess of a governor who left office without a constituency and got more press for dressing up as Elvis at block parties than legislative accomplishments. I hope the Trump re-elect's strategy is as dumb as this.

Agree with @danpfeiffer on this. Trump is a terrible president but he's a marketing genius. And any campaign that thinks an earned media first approach will win the day instead of a channel neutral, content warfare machine is going to lose.

My former boss Patrick Fitzgerald represented his friend James Comey.

He also prosecuted Scooter Libby, Conrad Black, and Rod Blagojevich. All three received pardons or commutations from Trump. That doesn't seem coincidental.

Bernie's National Press Secretary goes on national TV and tells an outright lie that Mike had heart attacks. It's completely false, and completely Trumpian. Sanders should apologize tonight.

> Alex Clearfield @AlexClearfield
> This is false. Michael Bloomberg has not had a heart attack (and there's no evidence he's had one that is being hidden). He did have two stents put in 20 years ago, which is a relatively minor procedure that is usually an overnight hospital stay. nytimes.com/2007/06/28/nyr… twitter.com/joshrogin/stat…

Surprised this held for so long. The issue was that presidents who face divisive primary challenges have historically lost. This was playing with fire.

Wisconsin will be hard. But it's not going to behave 10-15 points different than PA. Or 7-8 different than MI. That being said, it points out how Democrats must have margin for error in their electoral college strategy. AZ, NC, FL, maybe even GA need to be in play.

Wonderful Nevada caucus detail: in some rural areas there are literally dozens of precincts with zero registered Dems. But since every precinct statewide gets at least 1 county delegate, if anyone shows up and registers D tomorrow, their candidates gets a delegate.

There is a huge gap between the CDC career officials guiding the coronavirus response and the happy talk coming from the White House. The more the White House lets expectations get out of whack, the more Americans are going to be ripshit when the virus spreads.

Hear me out, but with Kudlow telling folks to buy low and that the coronavirus is "contained" and the CDC saying brace for "significant disruptions" maybe it would be smart to have ONE person or agency coordinating this

America s large number of uninsured, together w/ heavy Trump-era negative ncentives for undocumented & egal imm grants to use available healthcare services (public charge rule deportation, etc) will make it virtually mpossible to contain coronavirus spread n this country

Hiroaki Abe @Hiroak Abe · 13m
If things get sign ficantly worse the only credible way for gov't to contain a coronavirus outbreak wil be to backtrack on deportation threats & temporarily waive high out-of-coverage costs so people who may have coronavirus aren't deterred from seeking medical attention

The keys for Biden to have any chance of catching Sanders on the overall map would be:

1) Biden needs delegate "shutouts" in heavily black districts across the South, w/ no one else >15%
2) Biden needs Warren & Bloomberg to stay >15% in CA & TX to limit Sanders's delegate haul.

Not to mention, this is utter bullshit from Bernie Sanders. The Democratic party has been "ignoring the working class and middle class?" What is he even talking about? This is an outright lie meant to confuse young gullible voters who don't know better.

This Week @ThisWeekABC
NEW Bernie Sanders: "I am an existential threat to the corporate wing of the Democratic Party. For too long the Democratic Party and leaders have been going to rich peoples' homes raising money and they've ignored the working class and the middle class."

I'd put it a bit differently. There's some truth in what Sanders is saying. But he constantly frames the question as 'you either support me or you're part of the Democratic party's recent history which is mainly characterized by hypocrisy.' That's both false and wildly divisive

Should we be impressed with @PeteButtigieg's decision to quit the race 2 days before #SuperTuesday? No. Supporters across the country poured energy into his campaign in states from California to Maine. Instead of seeing the race through with them, Buttigieg made a political calculation.

Here's the programmed response from the @ewarren GOTV texts when you tell the campaign you're not going to vote for her. "We'll be back to the same corruption and hostility we have now." Pretty ugly, and not very convincing.
wouldn't cure the disease that created Donald Trump. In 4 years, we'd be back to the same corruption and hostility we have now. We can't just beat these threats to our democracy, we need to bury them. And I'm afraid that Biden's "business as usual" attitude won't make the big structural change we need.

I'd argue every candidate this primary has chased policy wonkery too much, in a trend Sen. Warren started last spring. She was rewarded by the media with consistent coverage of her constant plans, so others sought to get in on the action to try to break through.

Agree and it made it hard then for a consistent, simple message to break through. More OTRs and less white papers.

Important point:

The core promise of the Sanders campaign was generating enthusiasm / turnout.

But the two states with the biggest gain in turnout OVER 2008 -- Virginia and South Carolina -- were both won STRONGLY by Biden.

Biden, not Sanders, is bringing out the vote!

Polls closed is different than people in line. Once the polls close, it's fair game. People staying in line after polls closed is good, they should, but the news shouldn't have to wait for those folks

This kind of thinking is a bigger problem for the Bernie Sanders operation than I think people realize: if you treat voters and officials in the party you want to lead as the enemy, a lot of people in that party aren't going to trust you to lead them.

Actually, I'm not so sure Warren's voters are that pro-Sanders. They look to be roughly 50-50 in our data. Maybe 60-40. Her dropping out would not have reversed last night's outcomes.

Plus, yelling at supporters like this is... not the way to get them to join your campaign?

The most impressive aspect of Biden's performance yesterday was its breadth: he won urban voters, upscale & middle-class suburban voters AND rural/Appalachian voters.

Just about the only places he didn't win were heavily Latino or progressive activist hotbeds like college towns.

I am one of the few who wanted the TPP. Bern destroyed Mr. Obama's trade deal before it was approved.

First thing trump got rid of, too. So now we have tariff wars.

The TPP was with our good friends, too. Not just China.

The polling swing toward Biden is probably the fastest in the history of the primaries.

We have him gaining 36.2 points in national polls over the past 14 days. The previous record is John Kerry, who gained 32.3 points from 1/21 to 2/24/04 in our retrospective national average.

Other gains in the ~30 point range: Gary Hart in 1984 after New Hampshire and Dukakis late in the 1988 race as a bunch of people dropped out (but Jesse Jackson continued to contest the race). Then there are some ~20 point gainers like McCain '08 and Clinton '92

I want a president who gets emotional about an issue that kills 100 Americans - and injures hundreds more - every day.

If you're a Trump or Bernie supporter who thinks @JoeBiden's outrage over gun violence will offend the electorate's sensibilities, you're not paying attention.

Bo Erickson CBS @BoKnowsNews

Katie Hogan worked for the Obama administration and fought to pass and protect the #ACA. Dan Lipinski was the only Democrat from Illinois to vote against it, and has stood with Republicans time and time again to chip away at it. We need a real Democrat with real plans for #IL03.

The college is the largest employer in Middlebury and in Addison County. Unclear how this decision will affect payroll (there used to be seasonal hiring « buildings and grounds »). Downtown isn't as thriving as it was when I was a kid, but student spending is a big deal.

The movement of white-collar suburbs away from the GOP in Trump era that was the single most powerful force in 2018 shows all signs of continuing in 2020. This is the trade Trump has imposed on the GOP for better rural/blue-collar #s, w/startlingly little debate inside the party.

Biden's suburban surge continued in Michigan. Total votes rose 44% in Oakland County, 49% in urban-suburban Grand Rapids. Sanders barely topped his 2016 numbers there. These may be folks who swung Democratic in the 2018 midterms coming out now for Biden.

Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Act, passed in 1996, which imposed the initial ABAWDs restriction but allowed for waivers. At the time, the administration said the reform would "dramatically change the nation's welfare system into one that requires work in exchange for time-limited assistance."

It's a bummer that one candidate is showing genuine leadership in a crisis, with their eye on beating Donald Trump, and the other is just trying to fill out a bingo card of tired, rehearsed dings.

Paris Climate Accord was no small feat. A historic global achievement.

For Bernie to laugh it off & say we need more without providing roadmap for how we get more only underscores the notion that Bernie talks a good game, but can't answer question of: how do you make it happen?

Coronavirus has exposed our built-in callousness toward the elderly. "70? They had a pretty good run." But if you reach 70, your life expectancy is 85—the difference between knowing a grandchild at 10, say, and at 25. Old years matter as much as young years. Every year matters.

Usually, in times of crisis, the incumbent president enlists his predecessors to help instill a sense of common cause.

That hasn't happened yet.

BREAKING: Coronvirus Outbreak. One week after Italy's national lockdown (8 days after the north), Italy has three days with same number of new cases. This means 5 days after lockdown cases leveled off, consistent with typical incubation period of 3-5 days. This is good news.

The Democratic primary will be a complete mess in the coming months. Some people will use the chaos as an opportunity to spread conspiracy theories/cry foul, but there's no real factual debate whatsoever over who is the presumptive Democratic nominee at this point.

It remains an important story of the 2020 Democratic primary that Bernie Sanders is underperforming his 2016 vote share by roughly 10 percentage points, even as the field has consolidated behind two major candidates

Florida looks like it will beat 2016 turnout, despite everything. There were 1.71m votes cast that year; we're at 1.3m votes with half of precincts still out.

Too late for other states to institute in-person early voting, but a definite vote for mail ballots here.

Not the last time I'm gonna have to say this:

The very sharp increases in COVID-19 positives in the United States are inevitable given that testing is substantially increasing. And we want testing to increase. We are finally catching cases that we needed to catch 10 days ago.

Today, for example @COVID19Tracking recorded 20,045 new tests, of which 1985 (9.9%) were positive. One week ago, by contrast (Wednesday 3/11) there were only 2446 tests, of which 275 (11.2%) were positive.

The @COVID19Tracking data is not comprehensive and there are ups-and-downs from day to day and other quirks (some states don't report negatives). But you won't serve yourself well by freaking out whenever the numbers go up because they're gonna go way way up as we get more tests.

This ALSO means that comparing the US's growth curve to other countries isn't that helpful even if makes for interesting-looking charts and graphs. Because

When Trump claims he foresaw this would be a pandemic, remember that both the U.S. and South Korea had their first cases on the same day.

The U.S. squandered its lead time. South Korea didn't.

That's why South Korea has tested 290,000 people. The U.S. has tested only 75,000

Powell's Books, the storied independent bookstore in Portland, is laying off "the vast majority" of its workers.

"I can only hope we might find a way to come back together on the other side of these terrible times."

powells.com/featured/commu …

I have always described Powell's as resilient, lumbering sometimes, full of quirks and personality, but always resilient. We are having that resilience tested as never before. As you all know, we made the decision with only a small amount of time to act, to close all of our stores over the weekend. We felt we could not wait a moment longer for the sake of the health of our community. We had hoped to find some way to consider this a short-term closure. Today, only one more day out from that decision, we now understand what we all must face: an extended, difficult period of significant measures to protect public health. We don't expect we will be able to open our doors for at least 8 weeks, and very likely longer. When we do open our stores again, we expect the landscape of Oregon, and all of our abilities to spend money on books and gifts, will have changed dramatically. I wish we could have planned more and prepared you more; the situation simply moved too quickly and our responsibility to act quickly to protect public health fell too dire.

When we closed our doors, we also closed off the vast majority of our business without any prospect of it returning soon. As a result, we have been forced to make the unthinkable decision to lay off the vast majority of you in the coming few days. Many people have spoken publicly demanding we pay our employees and extend health insurance for the duration. No one can possibly know how much I wish I could make that happen. We are simply not that kind of business; we run on duct tape and twine on a daily basis, every day trading funds from one pocket to patch the hole in another. We have worked hard over the years to pay the best possible wages, health care and benefits, to make contributions to our community, to support other non-profits. Unfortunately, none of those choices leave extra money on hand when the doors close. And when the doors close, every possible cost must stop as well.

I am doing everything within my power to keep Powell's alive for the next generation of readers and writers, for the next generation of Portland and Oregon. And yet Powell's is also where I grew up and have spent most of my life, and I cannot imagine attempting to move forward without so many of you, colleagues who feel like family. Please know none of our choices were made lightly, and our slow communication has masked our desperate efforts to find a different possible path.

The testing delay is a failure of historic proportions with consequences that even now may only be dimly understood. Will there be, at the appropriate point, Congressional oversight to understand the breakdown?

This is a devastating indictment of the Republican Party in the Trump era. This is a U.S. Senator with a platform and power who knows a crisis is coming, but says and does nothing because it might upset Trump. Vote them all out. They are not fit to govern.

Forget the rhetoric. Just the facts:

1. People still can't get tests.
2. Hospital beds still not being added.
3. Doctors and nurses don't have protective gear

When that changes, then, the response will be moving.

We need a bias towards action right now. There is too much deference towards bureaucracy. People trying to get tests are told to prove that they were outside of the country or exposed to someone who has tested positive, which is unlikely given how few tests there have been.

I agree. This is why we did NOT do daily press briefings on Ebola. We focused on the response, and let the results speak for themselves. If the President and team spent more time getting tests, hospital beds, and PPE -- and less time talking about it -- we'd all be better off.

Yes! Even when there are tests, you can't get one. This is a Kafkaesque bureaucratic nightmare that needs to be addressed immediately!

Agree Scott. I think I'd delete one word, though. "We failed to fully plan" should be "We failed to plan." And your former administration should fess up.

We failed to plan for any of this going back a bunch of administrations. There have been buzzers sounding about pandemic preparedness since before Trump or Obama. It is inexcusable how antiquated our testing "system" is, and how inadequate our national stockpile

Eric Topol @EricTopo · 49m

You're right. But the difference with this one is that we watched the devastation in China for months and for then for 2 months in the US (Jan 21st first patient here)and still never had a test plan developed.

Wow: HHS Secretary Alex Azar couldn't get through to Trump to warn him about the coronavirus until Jan. 18. When he finally reached Trump by phone, the president interjected to ask about vaping and when flavored vaping products would be back on the market.

Paul delayed a vote for several days by forcing an amendment on the Corona virus response, and then voted against the final bill. That bill includes a provision making testing free.

So he got a test that he voted against everyone else being able to get.

BIDEN lays out 4 key things Trump must do:

1) Genuine leadership; be clear & honest with the country.

2) Use DPA to alleviate the medical equipment shortage.

3) Put experts front & center & listen to the science.

4) Prioritize stability for workers, not corporate bailouts.

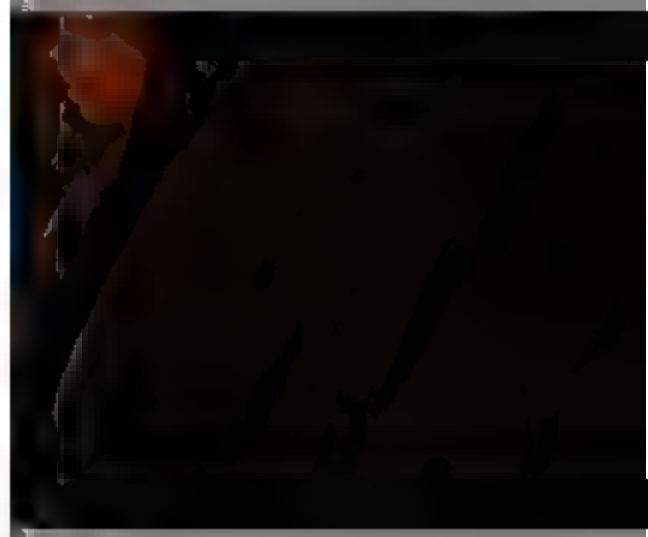
Jacob Sadowski lost not one but both of his jobs. Making matters worse, his car broke down.



His answer? He's part of what Instacart now says will be a 300,000-worker expansion to deal with coronavirus lockdowns.

Folks, Italy's lockdown does seem to finally be working.

new cases today 4,789 for a total of 63,927 — down about 1,000 from yesterday new deaths today 601 for a total of 6,077 — down about 50 from yesterday

Horrible numbers still. But big picture: some rays of optimism

This is such a weird situation. The bad economic outcome is 100% baked in. There's no preventing a deep recession—that's done. Book it.
But if health outcomes are bad—or just look bad—I'm not sure what the Admin defense is. Everyone will say that they blinked on health.

It's maddening if they just focus on stopping the spread, the economy will come back fine If they let 10+ million get infected, the economy is gone until a vaccine is rolled out And maybe beyond recession and into depression

Why is there a federal testing limit? And why is it so low?? Even if we were testing at a rationally high rate -- and we're not -- it wouldn't be possible to process all of those tests with a federal cap in place. And can universities and non-Labcorp & Quest labs process tests?

Why getting this stimulus done today is so important: I'm told Pennsylvania had at least 450K new jobless claims between 3/15 and 3/22.

And the national number tomorrow could be from 1 to 3 million, smashing all records.

We had PA projected for 354K based on earlier reports and the U.S. for 3.4 million

If that PA report is right, I think it's a really small chance the U.S. is less than 3 million. Really 4m is more likely

From the tone of Trumps presser you'd have no clue that it's been the worst 24 hours yet in terms of infections and deaths in the US. It's all optimism and self congratulations up there. And I suppose that is his goal.

And people are wondering why this guy is getting a 50% or better poll number for his messy handling of this crisis? He holds these "events" where he spews lies and is barely challenged by the reporters there. He's still holding rallies. Now they are at these things though.

My guess is the people responding to the polls are seeing what is being done and attributing it to Trump without realizing that it's the Governors that are doing the work

Experts expect 117K reported cases of coronavirus in the US by Sunday. They also think only about 10% of cases are actually being reported, though, so that would mean more than 1M actual cases.

The experts we surveyed a so think that under reporting could be anywhere from 3x (that is 3 actual cases for every reported case) to 50x (that is 50 actua. cases for every reported case) n the US That's a big range and one of the most mportant unknowns right now.

It is quite the statement of his character that Thomas Massie is legitimately threatening the health of his colleagues, many in their 60s or 70s even 80s, for a stunt on a bill he knows is going to pass. I hope no one forgets what he's done here.

Worth pointing out that even the numbers out of China that now appear to be doctored were still extremely alarming in early February. By the first week of March, Iran & Italy made it clear that COVID–19 wasn't "just like the flu" but Trump & FOX News still played down threat.

New Marquette poll of Wisconsin primary, trends since February (when there were more candidates running):

Biden: 62% (+47)
Sanders: 34% (+5)

Nearly every non-Sanders voter rushed to Biden in one of Sanders's best 2016 states. law.marquette.edu/poll/2020/04/0...

Were Sanders to drop out now, he'd get no more delegates. Staying in gets him hundreds of delegates. But he also runs the risk of running badly behind his 2016 numbers, losing states he'd won before, which is not a fantastic negotiating position.

Dave Weigel @daveweige · 12h
Context: In the 27 states/territories still left to vote, Sanders trailed Clinton in the 2016 delegate haul, thanks largely to her wins in NY/OH/PA. Sanders won WI in a rout and netted 10 delegates over Clinton. A loss like this would probably net Biden 15-20 delegates out of WI.

Rich people will not be harmed in this to any great extent, as usual. our extorted government bails them out from their addictions to money and gambling. Unless the oppressed finally rise up against the rich (and people are armed to the teeth) it will only worsen.

Whoa, from 3M's statement last night businesswire.com/news/home/2020 …

In the course of our collaboration with the Administration this past weekend, the Administration requested that 3M increase the amount of respirators we currently import from our [illegible] China operations into the U.S. We appreciate the assistance of the Administration to do exactly that. For example, earlier this week, we secured approval from China to export to the U.S. 10 million N95 respirators manufactured by 3M in China.

The Administration also requested that we work to bring respirators that we currently manufacture in the United States to other countries. Due to the [illegible] of global demand, we have already begun limiting exports of respirators manufactured in the United States, which is a significant [illegible] supplies to customers worldwide. Absent our actions, U.S. production would be significantly greater and available supplies of respirators in the United States would likely be significantly greater. Additionally, all export of respirators manufactured in the United States would likely be prevented, just as it is for many countries around the world that have already done so. If that were to occur, the number of respirators being made available in the United States would actually decrease. That is the opposite of what we and the Administration, on behalf of the American people, both seek.

The racial disparity of this crisis is horrific and is only beginning to be understood. We need specific policy remedies that do everything possible to help impacted families and communities.

Previously I called Trump the worst president in modern times—not of all time. But in the past month we have seen enough to take away the qualifier. With his mishandling of the coronavirus, Trump has established himself as the worst president in US history.

The death "rate" is roughly constant if you multiply by a constant value rather than add one.

That means the death rate is exponential.

(Another way of saying that is that the death rate is constant if measured in decibels. People understand decibels, even if vaguely.)

This will be swamped by the number of people who supposedly die of "severe pneumonia," COPD, etc. + those who die at home never confirmed as COVID-positive.

Minimizing death numbers is the next PR move.

I keep thinking about how much we studied all the big wars in school, but how little the 1918 flu epidemic was ever mentioned. Does it get one line in textbooks? Two?

Barely gets discussed. I never lectured on it when I was a professor and found little meaningful mention of it in the standard histories of the period when I researched a Politico article on it last month. Relied on some very good journal articles. But it's definitely odd.

I remember hearing it mentioned. But that's it -- a passing mention. Like a fire or an earthquake. Few lessons derived from it that made it to the classroom.

Donald Trump dismissed multiple warnings that COVID-19 would have a major impact. Now more than 14,000 Americans are dead and nearly 17 million Americans are unemployed. He has undermined confidence in American leadership, as the world looks to South Korea for the way out.

The stunning lack of leadership by the Federal government in the response to COVID-19 continues, part 749. "It's mind-boggling, actually, the degree of disorganization," said Tom Frieden, former Centers for Disease Control and Prevention director.

George Bush hesitated for 7 minutes on 9/11. It was his 1st year in office & he was with children. Donald Trump did nothing for 70 days when he was informed about Covid19. It was his 4th year in office & he was with experts. Trump chose to ignore the threat. That's unforgivable.

It's really not fair to say that @realDonaldTrump did nothing. He golfed and watched Fox News a lot in those 70 days

This is a scary #. The Trump re-elect has now outraised the Obama-Biden re-elect in '12 by $270 million by this date. Every Dem & ally needs to consider how we put in all the financial resources & strategic prowess we have and leverage our networks to elect @JoeBiden president.

The fact that all it takes to bring the Democratic Party together is a policy working group makes me smile. That's the attitude we need heading into November. Near term life or death decisions are on the ballot, let us never forget the stakes!

The fact that all it takes to bring the Democratic Party together is a policy working group makes me smile. That's the attitude we need heading into November. Near term life or death decisions are on the ballot, let us never forget the stakes.

This excerpt from @BarackObama's endorsement is worth pausing on.

As compelling and simple a case for @JoeBiden as I've heard -- and one perfectly tailored to the moment the country finds itself in.

"He's someone whose own life has taught him how to persevere — how to bounce back when you've been knocked down. When Joe talks with parents who've lost their jobs, we hear the son of a man who once knew the pain of having to tell his children he'd lost his. When Joe talks about opportunity for our kids, we hear the young father who took the train home each night so he could tuck his children into bed — and we hear the influence of Jill, a lifelong teacher. When Joe talks to families who've lost a hero, we hear another parent of an American veteran. A kindred spirit. Somebody whose faith has endured the hardest loss there is. That's Joe. Through all his trials, he's never once forgotten the values or the moral fiber that his parents passed on to him. That made him who he is. That's what steels his faith — in God, in America, in all of us."

When I lecture on the Great Depression, I give the rising unemployment numbers, noting that after more than three years of the crisis, there were 15,000,000 Americans unemployed in March 1933.

I don't think that number is going to hit students in quite the same way anymore.

The US population today is about 2.5 times as large as it was in 1930, so you obviously can't compare today with then by that metric.

But 15 million unemployed meant a 29% unemployment rate back then.

Again, that took three years. After one month, we'll likely be over 16% now.

22.5 million is 13% of the labor force. Unemployment was already at 3.5% before, so its actually probably around 16-17%

So many people would contribute to this if the administration provided direction. A wish is not a plan.

It's clear we don't have the testing and tracing in place to reopen the economy at this point. What's not clear to me is why the administration hasn't outlined a plan to actually get that infrastructure in place rather than pin a magic date to the calendar

#NEW from me on Trump's approval rating. It peaked last week and is slightly down now, portending a swift end to the shortest rally-around-the-flag effect in modern US history. Meanwhile, other world leaders (and US governors) are up 20 pts+ in the polls.

For the folks trolling me · this was not an attempt to defend LBJ's Vietnam policy · It was simply to note that presidents should a) not be sociopaths b) · process and internalize the consequences of their actions and failures · which by the way led to LBJ deciding not to run again
